The cultural and faith-based framing of human value, leadership and engagement has the potential to foster leadership and change. Ani Zonneveld, founder and president of Muslims for Progressive Values, and Sr. MaryAnne Huepper, CSJ, associate director, CSJ Center for Reconciliation and Justice, will share how they draw upon their own faith traditions to provide leadership for their organizations, and how their faith perspectives influence their leadership philosophy and practice. Students Kate Wilson and Julia Cima from the LMU Collegiate Panhellenic Council will join the discussion.
